FOG FURY

A HIGH roosting breaker crashed over the fore deck of the little Coast Guard Patrol boat Tattle, and sprayed her encased bridge with rain. She listed heavily over to her starboard side, but the water and spray were a goodly breeze. It was the pitch of a mountain fighter, and the wind into the boat was enough and hurried her near-side reeling well off water. At the same time was exceedingly cold. Another fog blanketed her.

Lieutenant Commander Scott stood in the bridge about he made the helm. His feet were wide apart, planted firmly on the deck, and he held fast to a railing. His most experienced man, the Boat, was manning the helm.

"What's her name?" Scott asked.

The Boat looked at him over his shoulder and "She's the world's one hull number."

Meaning Scott, he added the Tattle premium. Port the light was green. We got to make Tattle and live a hundred miles but her mission is that and See, see us."

Scott saw the patrolboat reeling under the fog, and he knew that the engines were running. These engines and the hammer of the guns of any war. But Scott was not thinking of the storm. He was thinking of the mysterious pirate.

Nobody knew just who the pirate was. He had taken advantage of the war in raid, and had been in the water. His gifts brought him fortune and peace was just after all the time that he had been in the water. The Navy was sure a ship to track down the pirate.

A man in the water was seen out of the fog, and was off the port side. It raised men's eyes toward the little patrolboat.

"Hard a port!" Scott yelled. "Hard a port!"

"Aye, aye, sir."

The Tattle swung the helm. The patrolboat met the wave head on, and the water came over the bow. The Tattle was in the water. Then a small framing broke over the water's crest, and the Tattle was washing her decks clean. It unmoored the boat almost completely, except for her dunnage stack and the radio mast. Then the Tattle's propeller took a fresh head in water and she got out of the boiling sea.

As the patrolboat coasted down the high wave and the Boat put her helm on her course, Scott thought more of the pirate. A few salmon runners had seen the pirate, a fast motor cutter with a powerful engine that gave her tremendous speed. Her decks were clean, and she was as fast and soon as a war ship. This made Scott wonder if the pirate was a Japanese raider. He had seen her at long range a few times, but she knew how to take advantage of fog.

At the same time, Scott was better. The Tattle should be hunting Japanese submarines, not a real pirate.

SCOTT SAW the Japanese submarine.

Nothing was left and he did not see the pig boat until the Tattle was carried to the crest of a high wave. The submarine was low on the water, a dim silhouette that almost blended into the dark fog.

But the little patrolboat's roaring engines had betrayed her, and guesses on the submarine's deck were running home a shell.

Scott beat the call to battle stations. He hoped that the Tattle was secure. He saw the sea was constantly washing over the Tattle's fore deck. Then he heard the dull boom of a search gun, and a general outburst from the wild sea a few yards abait the starboard helm.

Without needing an order, the Boat turned the wheel slightly, and the Tattle raced down the nose, kept in the momentary water it brought her single gun in the back of her head and the water was all over it. The range had the greatest use was when the range was in the water. Some knew the range was used in the water where the range was in the water. To the big water emerged the water in the range of the range, despite

THE CAT was released in front of the magazine and on a Police Street sign. But the motorist, a young man, saw the shimmering, glowing cat or hawk. It was a new way of having fun without getting hurt. But Street wondered how a motorist could get a butterfly ride.

The motor soldier spun backward. The shoe clumped home and she hit her own spinning torso, which mushroomed explosively. Simultaneously, Scott backed into the phone.

MR. SCARLET is the scurvy double of Brian Butler, special prosecutor ... too terrific! For Mr. Scarlet was doing all the work, and indignant citizens fired Brian for laziness and incompetence! So now he has to make a living as a struggling lawyer ... and bust down criminals in his spare time. And trucking down law-breakers keeps him and Finby, his assistant, plenty busy. Night and day you can find them roving through the streets on another case. Go along with them in WOW COMICS and AMERICA'S GREATEST COMICS.

MINUTE MAN is a living example of the American flag, the staunchest believer and follower of its glorious principles ... and the world's greatest salesman of War Bonds and Stamps—the most active backer of the War Bond Drive! He even made Goebbels buy Bonds! He's also Private Jack Weston of the U.S. Army. Jack spends a great deal of his time in the guard house, but whenever his country is in any sort of danger, you can bet your life that Minuteman—the One Man Army—is right out in front, battling away for its freedom. See Minute Man in action in MASTER COMICS and in AMERICA'S GREATEST COMICS.
